Pearl President Fiberglass Drums ...

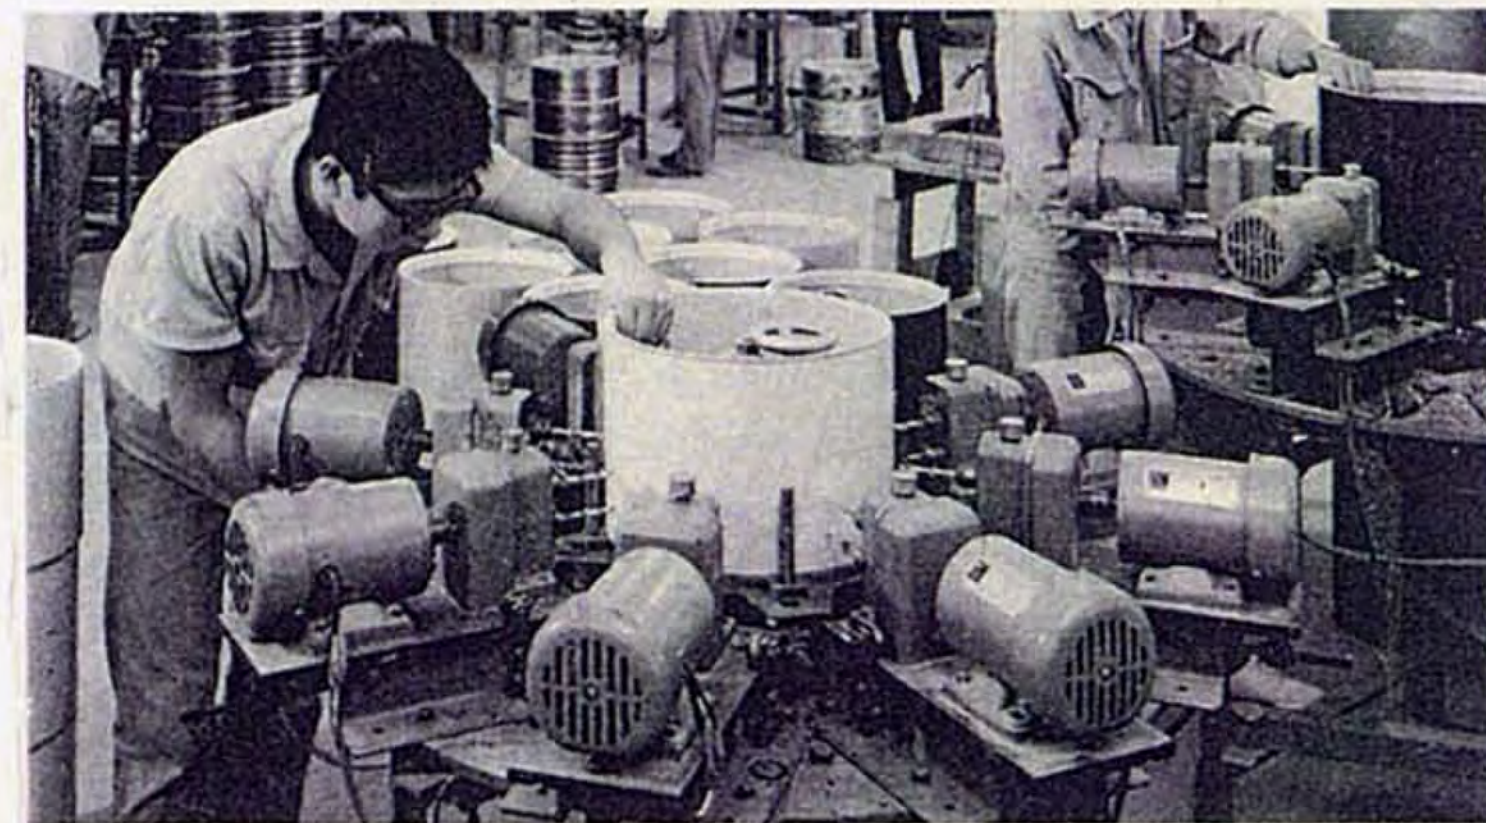

The most important feature of drums utilizing Fiberglass shells is sound! The density of the shell is consistent throughout. There are no soft spots such as those found in shells made of wood. The extremely hard and smooth inside surface produces the ultimate in tone production, with approximately 30% less effort required by the player. Those artists using drums made with wooden shells have usually doctored the inside surface by applying between six and eight coats of clear lacquer. Obviously, the additional labor and time required to so-doctor every wood shell drum would produce an instrument far too costly for the average player. This time-consuming process of applying lacquer in effect produces the sound found on the President Drums as an inherent quality. Fiberglass is wrapped around a perfect shaped circular mold and the shell, which ends up at 7/32nd's of an inch in thickness, is automatically capable of better sound production and possesses a strength many times that of a wooden shell. The President Snare Drum can best be compared to the finest chrome snare drums. It is the "hardness" of the inside that produces the "crisp" sound. The rim of the shell is also contoured and smoothly finished. This prevents splitting of even the thinnest heads used by today's top drummers. With wooden shells, again many hours of time are needed to hand-sand the rim to the same contour as the President's rims. The Fiberglass President sets produce more sound with less effort than any drum on the market today.
